

Definition of Terminal Degree

Faculty members are determined to possess a terminal degree when, in the judgment of the campus, they have earned the highest academic degree typically granted in their field of specialization, or a campus justified related field, and, their primary faculty assignments for the contract period are related to this degree. Terminal degrees approved by the Board of Regents are reflected in the terminal degree inventory table.