University Center Receives AIA Honor Award

SIOUX FALLS, SD –The South Dakota Society of the American Institute of Architects has presented its Honor Award to South Dakota Public Universities and Research Center (University Center) and TSP Inc.

The Honor Award is South Dakota AIA's highest award, and was given in recognition of the design of University Center's new facilities. Submissions for the award were juried by Paul Jeffrey, president of BVH Architects in Omaha, Neb.

In presenting the Honor Award, Jeffrey noted that the design of University Center North had a clear vision, and the vision evidenced itself in the ultimate functionality of the space. "We were impressed with the buildings – good proportion, use of material, and excellent lighting," said Jeffrey.

University Center's facilities were designed by TSP Inc. The campus covers more than 260 acres in northwest Sioux Falls. It includes a 60,000 square foot classroom building and 21,000 square-foot Graduate Education and Applied Research (GEAR) Center.
