

U.S. Professor of the Year for the State of South Dakota

The South Dakota Board of Regents Wednesday congratulated James Feiszli, director of music at South Dakota School of Mines & Technology, as U.S. Professor of the Year for the state of South Dakota. Dr. Feiszli was honored by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and the Council for Advancement and Support of Education for his work to build a model music program at an institution that focuses on science and engineering. Pictured from left are SDSM&T President Heather Wilson, Dr. Feiszli, and Regents President Dean M. Krogman.

(photo credit: South Dakota Board of Regents)