AGENDA ITEM: 4 – B (2)

SUBJECT: New Certificate: USD Graduate Certificate in Spanish Translation

The University of South Dakota (USD) requests authorization to offer a graduate certificate in Spanish Translation. The certificate will provide a credential to students with capacity for Spanish translation, and has students explore theory and ethics, in order to meet the region’s needs for professional translation services. The certificate requires 16 credit hours to complete. Four new courses will be developed that are specific to the practice of translation.

DRAFT MOTION 20170810_4-B(2): I move to approve USD’s graduate certificate in Spanish Translation as described in Attachment I.

1. Is this a graduate-level certificate or undergraduate-level certificate (place an "X" in the appropriate box)?

Undergraduate Certificate Graduate Certificate

2. What is the nature/purpose of the proposed certificate?

The graduate certificate in Spanish Translation will help USD students meet the increasing regional, national, and international demand for certified Spanish translators. Students will explore the theory, ethics, and practice of Spanish-English translation and will develop into multilingual, interculturally competent professionals prepared to serve South Dakota and the world.

3. Provide a justification for the certificate program, including the potential benefits to students and potential workforce demand for those who graduate with the credential.¹

The need for translation services is growing rapidly both in South Dakota and in neighboring states.² According to the US Census, the Hispanic population of South Dakota increased 102.9% between 2000 and 2010.³ While English is the common language in the state of South Dakota, 6.54% of the population speaks languages other than English.⁴ Of these, Spanish is the number one language with 2.06% followed by Dakota/Lakota at 1.39%.⁵ As the Spanish-speaking population increases, translators will be needed to allow people with limited English proficiency to understand medical, legal, and commercial language, to fully assert their rights, and to participate in legal proceedings. According to Title VI of the U.S.C.:

“language for limited-English-proficiency individuals can be a barrier to accessing important benefits or services, understanding and exercising important rights, complying with applicable responsibilities, or understanding other information provided by programs and activities...In certain circumstances, failure to ensure that LEP persons can effectively participate in or benefit from federally assisted programs and activities may violate the prohibition under Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 USC 2000d and Title VI regulations against national origin discrimination.”⁶

The department of Modern Languages and Linguistics at USD receives repeated requests for translation and interpretation services from the community. Currently, undergraduate students and faculty interpret annually for the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program as part of an ongoing service-learning project. Additionally, an internship with the USD School of Law Immigration Clinic (SPAN 494) pairs advanced Spanish majors with student attorneys to assist with asylum and refugee cases from Latin America. We have also received many requests that we have not been able to satisfy from medical clinics in Sioux Falls, the Clay County Courthouse, and from individuals seeking professional translators via email. However, while faculty prepare and supervise students before and throughout participation in these programs, independent professional work in the field of translation requires study, training, and practice in the specific skill of translation--something that the current BA in Spanish at USD is not designed to do.

The potential benefits are numerous both to USD students and to the State of South Dakota. The USD Certificate in Spanish Translation will prepare students to pass the certification exam of the American Translators Association (ATA).⁷ Since South Dakota is one of only seven states that does not yet require certification of translators for courtrooms or for other state functions, many clients are forced to seek qualified translators outside the state or rely on insufficiently trained friends or acquaintances. Furthermore, by focusing this certificate on Spanish translation (written) rather than on interpretation (oral), and by leveraging the Internet, graduates will be able to work locally, nationally, and internationally in the translation profession while maintaining their residence in South Dakota. Lastly, with this program, students will finally have the opportunity to pursue graduate work in Spanish in the state. The nearest graduate Spanish programs to USD focus expressly on language teaching, including the University of Nebraska, Omaha, and the University of Nebraska, Kearney. The University of Nebraska, Lincoln offers graduate degrees in Spanish with a focus on literature, as do the University of Wyoming and the University of Northern Iowa. The closest graduate program in Spanish translation is at the University of Iowa.

According to the US Bureau of Labor Statistics’s Occupational Outlook Handbook (BLS), “translators generally need specialized training on how to do their work. Formal programs in interpreting and translating are available at colleges and universities nationwide and through non-university training programs, conferences, and courses. Many people who work as interpreters or translators in more technical areas—such as software localization, engineering, or finance—have a master’s degree. Those working in the community as court or medical interpreters or translators are more likely to complete job-specific training programs or certificates.”⁸ The BLS predicts that the national job outlook for interpreters and translators is “much faster than average” with a growth rate of 29%.⁹ The annual mean wage of interpreters and translators in South Dakota is between $39,610 - $45,700.¹⁰ The annual median wage for translators nationally is $43,590.¹¹

4. Who is the intended audience for the certificate program (including but not limited to the majors/degree programs from which students are expected)?

Any bilingual (Spanish-English) college graduate with excellent writing skills, or students graduating with a BA in Spanish from any SDBOR school (USD, SDSU, NSU, and BHSU) are ideal candidates for this program, as are students from nearby parts of many of the neighboring states, including ND, IA, NE, and MN. Since many Spanish majors double major in other disciplines, including Business, Medical Biology, Criminal Justice, International Studies, Communication Sciences and Disorders, Nursing, and Psychology, many will be interested in stacking their Spanish BA with a graduate translation certificate.

5. List the courses required for completion of the certificate in the table below (if any new courses are proposed for the certificate, please attach the new course requests to this form):¹²

In order to prepare students sufficiently for the ATA certification exam, we are requesting a 16 credit certificate instead of the usual 12. In addition to 9 credits of work in Spanish and Spanish Translation, 7 credits of LING at the graduate level is advised in order for students to gain a deep understanding of how languages and dialects work, the structures of languages, and the relationship between language and culture. Potential Topics in LING which are relevant to translation include:
